

Out There

A street-smart guide to New York news and newsmakers

©2008 MIRU KIM

Tunnel vision Being underground in New York feels gross no matter what, so just imagine standing in Miru Kim's, uh, shoes. For her "Naked City Spleen" project, the 25-year-old artist goes into subway tunnels and photographs herself in the nude. "I find it liberating," she says, adding that she's done similar projects in Paris and Berlin. Still, there are drawbacks: She found a dead body, and also surprised a homeless man. "But once I explained that it was art," she recalls, "he was okay with it." For more info, go to mirukim.com.—Howard Halle